

After years of inconvenience caused by telemarketers I signed up for the no call lists. I never responded to a business that calls me. When I am interested in or require a service I contact the business. If a business wants to contact me, use the mail or advertise in local papers or periodicals.

As it is now many of these organizations get around the list by stating they are conducting surveys. After a couple of instances of that it became clear that in fact they were attempting to sell something.

I don't want to be bothered by folks trying to sell me something. If I want anything, I'll seek out the seller.